I may mention in passing that all kinds of lace and embroidery are very much in favor just over and until such time as the longover and until such time as the long-obscured sun indecently shows up the shabbiness, which has blushed unseen, in the costumes which have done duty since October or November. The picturesque note still prevails, and is likely to do so in these days of decorative fashion; indeed, the leading houses of London still borrow their best designs from the Louvre and Nawerl of the convensional gallery.

FOR YOUNG AND OLD.

A perfect craze is being shown at present among some of the best-dressed women for a combination of orange and blue, but the right choice of color is such an important point in a gown of this description that many a toilette has been entirely spoiled by the failure of the couturiere to hit the exact tone which insures success. The blue, which s almost invariably used as the foundation, is of the palest shade, a single veiling of ofange ninon giving a lovely sunrise glow to the gown. In many cases the veiling of chiffon is bordered with a deep hem of pale blue panne and richly embroidered in gold thread.

ARF DRINKIN

IF YOU DRINK, READ AND CONSIDER

One of the most learned medical writers of the age has this to say of the drinking man who drinks either in large or small quantities: Two marked symptoms of insanity are prominent in drinking men. One is in the periodical drinker, who drinks to excess for a short time and then abstains. This is practical acute mania—an insane impulse—which resists all efforts of control; the other in the so-called moderate drinker, who drinks constantly in what he terms moderation, and because he is not incapacitated or changed in degree of comfort, believes that he is bene-Careful studies of persons who drink in so-called small quantities indicate they are the most defective of all inebriates." have by no means had their day, and white satin is frequently trimmed with brilliantly colored and sequined net being draped over the satin foundation.

For dowagers the season has some charming novelties in store, first in importance being the alliance of black and gray. A gown of black panne, carried out in the Princess styles, and closely moulded to the figure, boasts a square decolletage outlined with a lovely embroidery in gray ribbon, chenille and sequins. From this falls a veiling of black tulle embroidered to correspond, the design taking the forms of clusters and trails of grapes, each bunch, leaf and tendril being outlined with the finest silver thread.

Waters, Coffee.

In preparing this dinner for six persons take for the soup five large potatoes and three onlons. Peel and chop the onions pare, dice and rinse the potatoes. Mix, add a half teaspoonful of salt and one pint of boiling water, cover and simmer slowly until the potatoes break, then rub all through a seive. Scald a pint of milk with a stalk of celery or pinch of celery seed, strain, mix with the puree and return to the fire. Add one level tablespoonful of flour blended with a little cold milk and stir until slightly thickened. Add white pepper and more salt. If necessary, if too thick thin with a little hot milk. Simmer for ten minutes and when in the ureen sprinkle with a teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley.
